BUSINESS AUDIT PREPARED FOR

Cool Geek Media 2

https://coolgeek.me

Cool Geek Media presents as a competent, friendly local marketing agency but the site is vague, generic, and thin on proof. You’re not clearly differentiated from dozens of similar shops and your best wins are mentioned only briefly, without numbers or offers. Tightening your positioning, clarifying services and outcomes, and turning existing wins into specific proof will materially improve lead quality and conversion.

Prepared by SoulPrint Engine Pro · Comprehensive read of website, social presence, reviews, brand voice, and competitive position.

WHY THIS SCORE

Core messaging is serviceable and the work examples hint at real competence, but generic copy, weak differentiation, and a thin conversion path are leaving a lot of revenue on the table.

TOP STRENGTHS

Clear basic service promise

The hero and top copy quickly communicate that you're a marketing agency: "ONLINE MARKETING", "SOCIAL MEDIA MARKETING", and a "team of creative people and marketing experts" with "a few decades of experience in marketing & sales." Visitors don't have to guess what category you're in.

Outcome-oriented project snippets

The Projects section speaks to business results, not just tactics: for the pain management clinic you "were able to increase new patient appointments significantly," and for senior living you're helping communities "get in-front of potential residents and their adult children." This is the right kind of story, just underdeveloped.

Human, approachable tone

Lines like "Let's chat! We promise not to waste your time." and friendly details (e.g., awesomepeople@coolgeek.me in policies) create a down-to-earth, non-stuffy feel that's attractive to small and mid-size businesses wary of big-agency jargon.

CRITICAL ISSUES

Vague, interchangeable positioning

Phrases like "dynamic team of creative people," "we'll learn everything we can about your business," and "we create a plan and track the results for you" could appear on any generic agency site; there's no sharp who-you-serve or what-you-do-better statement, making you blend into the noise and likely depressing inquiry rates.

Thin, nonspecific proof of results

You mention "increase new patient appointments significantly" but offer zero numbers, timeframes, or client quotes; there are only two brief project blurbs and no testimonials, logos, or case study pages, which makes it hard for a skeptical buyer to trust that you can replicate outcomes for them.

Weak conversion path and offer clarity

The only real call to action is a soft "Let's chat!" plus phone/email; there's no clear primary CTA button hierarchy, no indication of what happens on that call, and no simple entry offer (audit, consult, starter package), which increases friction and makes it easy for visitors to bounce or postpone contact.

PRIORITIZED RECOMMENDATIONS

The highest-leverage fixes

Each recommendation is paired with a concrete way SoulPrint Engine Pro helps you act on it — drafting, research, monitoring, or preparing the deliverable for you to ship.

1. Sharpen your positioning around specific niches and services

HIGH

Decide whether you are primarily a social/online marketing specialist for healthcare and senior living (as your projects imply) or a generalist agency, and state that explicitly in the hero and About sections. For example, a line like “We help pain clinics and senior living communities turn online attention into booked appointments and tours” is far more compelling than “dynamic team of creative people.” Measure success via an increase in qualified inquiries from your target verticals and better alignment between inbound leads and your best-fit clients.

Expected impact: Clarified positioning should meaningfully improve lead quality and can increase conversion from visitor to inquiry by 20–40% over time.

HOW SOULPRINT ENGINE HELPS YOU ACT ON THIS

Use SoulPrint’s Brand Voice Engineer agent to workshop 2–3 sharp positioning statements based on your current niches (pain management, senior living, local services) and generate updated hero and About copy. A short Competitive Researcher mission can scan regional competitors to ensure your revised positioning is distinct before you update the site.

2. Turn existing projects into quantified case studies

HIGH

Upgrade the “Pain Management Clinic” and “Senior Living Communities” blurbs into one-page case studies with specific metrics (e.g., “+47% new patient appointments in 90 days,” “2.3x more tour requests in six months”), channels used, budget ranges, and a short client quote. Add a “Results” or “Case Studies” nav item and link concise summary tiles back to these detail pages. Track engagement with these pages and look for higher close rates among prospects who view them before sales calls.

Expected impact: Concrete, metric-driven proof can significantly increase trust and close rates, often adding 10–30% lift in proposals accepted.

HOW SOULPRINT ENGINE HELPS YOU ACT ON THIS

Spin up a Case Study Builder mission using the Conversion Copywriter and Customer Insights Analyst agents: you feed in raw campaign numbers and client anecdotes, and SoulPrint drafts polished, on-brand case study pages and summary blurbs as PDFs you can add to your Document Library and repurpose on your site.

3. Design a clear primary CTA and low-friction entry offer

HIGH

Replace the generic “Let’s chat!” with a concrete, outcome-framed offer such as “Book a 20-minute strategy review” or “Request a free 3-channel audit,” and make it a consistent primary button in the hero and nav. On the contact page, explicitly outline what happens on the call, who it’s for, and what they’ll walk away with, reducing perceived risk. Measure changes in form submissions, booked calls, and show-up rates after you launch the new offer.

Expected impact: Clarifying the CTA and offer typically improves click-through to contact by 15–25% and can reduce no-show rates.

HOW SOULPRINT ENGINE HELPS YOU ACT ON THIS

Have the Funnel Architect agent in your Marketing Team design 2–3 entry-offer concepts tailored to your audience and draft the exact CTA copy plus a brief call agenda. The Conversion Copywriter agent can then rewrite your hero, nav, and contact page sections to consistently feature the chosen offer, ready for you to paste into your CMS.

4. Expand and clarify your services into concrete packages

MEDIUM

Right now you list generic concepts like “STRATEGIES,” “ANALYTICS,” and “GREAT RESULTS” without naming specific services (e.g., Facebook Ads Management, Local SEO, Email Nurture Campaigns) or typical engagement models. Introduce a Services page with 3–5 clearly named offerings, short descriptions, ideal client profiles, and starting price ranges or tiers (e.g., ‘Growth Starter’, ‘Multi-Location Builder’). Track which service pages attract the most traffic and lead to inquiries, then refine your focus around what sells best.

Expected impact: Clear, named service packages can improve perceived professionalism and reduce qualification friction, often boosting sales conversations and reducing price shopping.

HOW SOULPRINT ENGINE HELPS YOU ACT ON THIS

Use the Offer Architect agent to translate your current work into 3–5 named service packages with benefits, inclusions, and suggested price bands. The Conversion Copywriter then drafts a full Services page and individual package blurbs, output as a ready-to-use PDF and web copy via the Document Library.

5. Add social proof: testimonials, logos, and trust signals

MEDIUM

You currently rely only on your own claims; prospects have no third-party validation. Collect 3–6 short testimonials from your best clients (especially in pain management and senior living), add simple logos of brands you've worked with (with permission), and include any notable mentions (e.g., the Expertise.com listing) as "Featured in" badges. Measure change in time-on-site and ask new leads what convinced them to reach out to validate impact qualitatively.

Expected impact: Adding social proof can meaningfully increase trust and inquiries, often by 10–20% for low-visibility agencies.

HOW SOULPRINT ENGINE HELPS YOU ACT ON THIS

Start a Reviews & Proof mission where the Reviews Therapist and Customer Insights Analyst agents draft testimonial request emails, propose testimonial questions, and compile any existing mentions (like Expertise.com). The Brand Designer agent can then lay out a simple 'Client Stories' strip and logo bar you can hand to your web developer.

6. Clarify ideal client and vertical focus on About and Projects

MEDIUM

Your About and Projects sections hint at strengths in healthcare and senior living, but you never explicitly say who you're best for. Add a short "Who we work best with" segment that calls out 2–3 primary verticals (e.g., clinics, senior living, local service businesses) and mention relevant experience there. This filters out poor-fit leads and attracts more of your highest-LTV clients. Monitor the industry mix of inbound leads before and after to gauge alignment.

Expected impact: Better vertical signaling can reduce sales cycle length and improve client fit, even if total inquiry volume stays flat.

HOW SOULPRINT ENGINE HELPS YOU ACT ON THIS

Ask the Customer Insights Analyst agent to profile your existing client list (you can upload a CSV) and surface your most profitable, best-fit segments. Then the Brand Voice Engineer will draft an 'Ideal Clients' section and rewrite your Projects/About blurbs to highlight those verticals in your tone.

7. Optimize navigation, layout, and contact friction

LOW

Ensure each top-nav item ("HOME, ABOUT US, SERVICES, PROJECTS, CONTACT") has a clear, content-rich page rather than relying on a single scroll page. On Contact, minimize friction: keep the CAPTCHA usable, clearly show phone and email, and consider embedding a simple scheduling link so busy owners can grab a slot instantly. Track form abandon rates and call bookings to see whether changes reduce drop-off.

Expected impact: Cleaning up the navigation and reducing contact friction yields smaller but still meaningful gains in completed inquiries and perceived professionalism.

HOW SOULPRINT ENGINE HELPS YOU ACT ON THIS

Use a UX Auditor mission to have the Website UX Strategist agent review your current layout (via live URL) and propose an improved site map plus wireframe-style section order. The Technical Explainer agent can then draft clear implementation notes (including sample HTML snippets or embeds) for your developer or webmaster.

8. Leverage social presence and content to support authority

LOW

You have a LinkedIn company profile and possibly a podcast, but none of this is surfaced on the site. Add subtle links and a 'Resources' or 'Insights' section that points to your most useful content, and maintain a light but consistent posting cadence that showcases campaign wins, client stories, and practical tips. Track referral traffic from social to your site and the share of leads mentioning content as how they found you.

Expected impact: While slower-burn, consistent authority content can improve brand recall and referral pipeline over the medium term.

HOW SOULPRINT ENGINE HELPS YOU ACT ON THIS

Use the Social Queue with the Content Marketer agent to auto-draft a month of LinkedIn posts repurposing your new case studies and client wins, complete with on-brand cover images via the Brand Assets + Logo Library. You review, tweak, and either schedule or approve auto-publish to keep a steady presence without manual drafting.

BRAND VOICE READ

Stated mission vs. how the market hears it

Stated mission. Helping businesses engage customers online and offline through a dynamic team of creative marketing experts who develop strategies, track analytics, and drive great results.

Actual voice. Friendly, approachable, somewhat casual, but also generic and high-level; it feels like a small, personable shop that cares, but doesn't articulate a strong point of view or expertise.

The gap. You imply strategic depth and decades of experience, yet your actual copy is light on specifics, frameworks, and examples; the voice claims 'great results' but doesn't talk like a seasoned specialist in any one vertical, which undermines the promise of expertise.

DEEPER ANALYSIS

Section-by-section read

WEBSITE ANALYSIS

The website communicates your basic value proposition and offers clear navigation labels (Home, About Us, Services, Projects, Contact), but most sections are shallow and generic. The hero statement and services ('STRATEGIES,' 'ANALYTICS,' 'GREAT RESULTS') lack specificity and read like stock agency language. The Projects area points to real outcomes but doesn't quantify them or offer deeper context. There is a contact phone, email, and likely a form with CAPTCHA, but no compelling, clearly defined primary CTA or explanation of what prospects get by reaching out, which weakens conversion.

SOCIAL PRESENCE

Public search shows a LinkedIn company profile and references to a podcast, but your main site does not surface any social links or content feeds. This creates a disconnect: you likely have more personality and expertise living off-site that visitors never see. There's no evidence of a consistent posting cadence or integrated content strategy that supports lead generation, and prospects can't easily 'stalk' you to build trust before reaching out.

REVIEWS SUMMARY

There are no easily found public reviews specific to Cool Geek Media as a marketing agency; most review search results relate to an unrelated CoolGeek audio hardware brand. The notable third-party mention is an Expertise.com listing that briefly cites your work for a pain management clinic. In practice, this means prospects must rely solely on what you say about yourself, with no ratings, testimonials, or case studies to validate your claims.

COMPETITIVE CONTEXT

Cool Geek Media competes in a crowded field of small digital and social marketing agencies in Arizona and beyond. Competitors like ClickFormula and Accufact Media differentiate themselves with more laser-focused service offers and data-forward messaging, while local players such as True-Blue Marketing & Creative lean on longevity and visible client rosters. Your current positioning as a friendly, experienced but generic agency leaves you vulnerable to both sides: performance-specialists who promise clear ROI and long-established locals who feel safer; your path to winning is to niche your story and show specific, repeatable results.

COMPETITIVE LANDSCAPE

Direct competitors

Three companies playing the same game — and where they're ahead.

ClickFormula

https://clickformula.com

Presents more specific, performance-focused digital marketing offerings with clearer funnel and PPC positioning, which can feel more ‘plug-and-play’ to ROI-focused clients.

Accufact Media

https://accufactmedia.com

Emphasizes data-driven campaigns and detailed service descriptions, which helps prospects quickly understand exactly what they’d be buying.

True-Blue Marketing & Creative

https://truebluemarketing.com

Has local Arizona presence with more visible social proof and longer tenure, making them appear like a safer, well-established choice for conservative buyers.

TACKLE THESE WITH SOULPRINT ENGINE PRO

SoulPrint Engine Pro helps you close the gap between ‘we’re a capable, friendly agency’ and a site that actually sells that story with precision. The platform’s specialist agents—like the Brand Voice Engineer, Conversion Copywriter, and Customer Insights Analyst—draft sharper positioning, quantified case studies, and clear service packages so your team only has to review and implement. Mission Mode and the Competitive Researcher keep an eye on peers and mentions like Expertise.com, feeding you updated proof points and differentiators over time. With the Social Queue and Document Library, every case study and win can be quickly repurposed into on-brand social content and sales PDFs, giving you a repeatable system for authority and lead generation. Start with SPE Pro to have these pieces drafted and organized, so your team can spend their energy on delivery and closing, not on blank-page marketing work.

Start free at pro.soulprintengine.ai